

RENTALS

The URBAN NATION Museum in Berlin-Schöneberg opened in 2017 as Germany's first street art museum. The striking façade on the corner of Bülow- and Zietenstraße serves as a canvas for artists from all over the world and is redesigned at regular intervals. The building itself can therefore be described as a piece of art.

MUSEUM

The URBAN NATION museums interior design is especially characterized by an urban „look and feel“. By transferring street perspectives to the inside of the building, the international architecture agency „GRAFT“ created an open spacial concept with exhibition areas that partly extend over two floors or more. A bridge-like „high line“ connects and leads through the gallery sections and enables various perspectives

Besides its function as an exhibition space, the museum is also an extraordinary and unique event location for up to 150 guests. The right wing of the building was designed as an auditorium and enables a variety of event formats such as networking receptions, company celebrations, (gala) dinners, after work parties, creative meetings, team workshops, readings, (product) presentations, panel discussions and many more.
